Two Men from Schaghticoke Looking for Young Englishmen whom they Accuse of Swindling—New Form of an Old Game.
Two men from Schaghticoke, Rensselaer county, were in Brooklyn yesterday, seeking police assistance in discovering the whereabouts of Harry Sibley, a young Englishman, by whom they said they had been swindled. They said, to begin with, that about 60 years ago

Schachtlecke two months ago. He was well dressed and fascinating, but out of funds. Three weeks ago he had mailed a letter postmarked London, England, which he said was written by his sister. It announced that his uncle had died and left him £80,000, £20,000 of which would be brought to him by two lawyers on the steamer in Wisconsin. The two visitors at the Police Headquarters said that they came on with him to New York to meet his lawyers, paying travelling and hotel expenses on his promise to refund the money advanced when he got the first instalment of his fortune. He said that he had been in London for a year, expected to be married, and his friends arranged for him to go to the States.

Chairman John O.'Brien told the Republican Central Committee last night that more than the required number of Assembly district associations had asked that the district associations' constitution be amended as to permit all Republicans who voted abroad in 1880 to vote at the coming primaries of early winter they are members of associations or not. Michael Cregan moved that in accordance with the constitution the proposed amendment be referred to the Central Committee to the district associations, and the motion was carried. Then Mr. Isaac Dayton introduced the district associations' amended constitution.

Mr. E. J. Johnson's Bill of Particulars

The divorce against her husband, Eli Johnson, the 46-year-old actress, was granted by a New York state judge last week. The suit is based on allegations in 1981 that Johnson had an affair with a woman who was a private detective at Lake Okauchee camp meeting, in 1981. Both parties will develop a record of scandal.

Johnson, 46, is a former actor who has worked with the stars and the Six of August, 1981, and also between 1981 and 1982, he was a member of the cast of the play "The Last Days of Pompeii," near Okauchee Lake, in the neighboring town of Okauchee. Mr. Johnson broke his marital vows with Evelyn Annin, 46, a former actress.

Telegraph Strikers at Work for Themselves

The Citizens' and Telegraphers National Union Telegram and Cablegram Company is the main union of the telegraphers. The union is currently on strike. Eugene O'Connor, one of the company's top executives, is the Boston member of the Executive Committee of the Brotherhood, and Charles E. Clute and Thomas W. Clute are the Boston members of the Brotherhood.

"The Boston scheme," said one of the telegraphers, "is a Boston scheme."

Boston for Fencing or Confidence Men
Charles H. Winslow, 18 years of age, in employ of W. B. Newhall, dealer in hardware at Chambers street, from going often for the mail has become familiar with the faces of confidence men who trade in the neighborhood of the Post Office.

When the Bridge Cars May Run.—Wayfare on the Brooklyn Bridge yesterday was an occasional car whizz by on its trial trip. At 10 o'clock the first of the new cars was driven by a man who had been put on cars during the day, and that trial trip was the last of the kind. The cars will be driven again next week. It would be impossible, the time to test the cars was so short, to have them run on the bridge next week to handle the cars. He thought it was better to have them run on the bridge next week to handle the cars in two weeks.

The object in view was the organization of workingmen to place candidates in the field in those districts of the city where the workingmen's influence and vote were such that labor advocates might be successful. He argued that by doing this, and concentrating their efforts in such districts, workingmen might succeed in securing men who would look after their interests in the Legislature. Several others spoke, and the meeting closed.
